

Transition Austin Needs Your Help

Join us at our next meeting...

You may be wondering how Austin is going to:

- Reduce fossil fuel use & carbon emissions in response to climate change
- Build sustainability & resilience in response to the end of the age of oil
- Strengthen our local economy in response to global economic instability

Have you experienced an “Ah-ha!” moment, or are you just curious about these issues? Transition Austin is an Austin organization, linked to a global network of similar organizations, whose objective is to spark the city’s planned change from an oil-dependent culture to one of local resilience, characterized by sustainable lifestyles.

This is your opportunity to join us in building a sustainable, resilient community – YOU are invited to the next meeting to share you ideas and skills. Help us develop grass-roots marketing and education campaigns to present Transition to neighborhoods and groups. You’ll even be inspired to spark your own neighborhood’s participation.

Already, Transition Towns are moving forward in Jollyville (northwest Austin), Upper East Austin, East Austin, the Decker Lake area, and Southwest Austin. They are supported by the Transition Austin Hub, and the entire effort is based on the global Transition model.
